Role card customer

You are 17 years old and you are doing your apprenticeship. You are very interested in opening a current account for your monthly salary to be paid into. That is why you go to a customer advisor at your bank.

Role card bank clerk

You are the customer advisor of the local bank. Your task is to give customers advice on their banking transactions. Your diary shows you that a customer who wants to open an account has made an appointment with you. This customer is going to arrive in a few minutes.

Task: group 1

Working time: 30 minutes

Legal incapacity

- 1. Read §§ 104 and 105 of the Civil Code and the following text.
- 2. Include the essential parts of the stage "legal incapacity" on a poster.
- 3. Choose one person from your group to present the results to the whole class.

You can find the essential parts of the legal incapacity in §§ 104 and 105 of the Civil Code.

It falls within the articles 104 and 105 of the Civil Code that the declarations of intention, which are expressed by a person with a disability, are void ab initio. This means the declaration of intention is invalid right from the beginning. Only the legal representatives can express declarations of intention which oblige the persons with a disability. The legal representatives of minors are principally the parents together.

A declaration of intention which is expressed vis-á-vis a person with a disability is not effective before it reaches the legal representatives (§ 131 Civil Code). If for instance, a 5-year-old child inherits a block of flats, the notice of a tenant is not going to be effective until it is transmitted to the parents.

If a person with a disability acts as a messenger, the legal incapacity does not matter. This is because the messenger does not declare their own intention but only transmits the already finished declarations of intentions of another person.

Task: group 2

Working time: 30 minutes

Limited capacity

- 1. Read §§ 106 108 (1) and §§ 110-113 of the Civil Code and the following text.
- 2. Include the essential parts of the stage "limited capacity" on a poster.
- 3. Choose one person from your group to present the results to the whole class:

You can find the essential part concerning "limited capacity" in the articles 106-108 of the Civil Code. These articles show that a person of limited capacity normally needs the advice and consent of a legal representative to enter into a transaction. Declarations of intention expressed by persons of limited capacity are in abeyance. They will be valid if the legal representatives give their previous consent or their later permission. If the permission is given, the legal transaction will be valid, and if the permission is refused, the legal transaction will be void.

However, there are some exceptions to the rule which allow a person who is incapable of managing his/her own affairs to enter into a transaction without the advice and consent of a legal representative.

These are

- legal transactions which only have advantages for the person of limited capacity
   (§ 107 of the Civil Code)
- ❖ legal transactions that are financed by pocket money (§ 110 of the Civil Code)
- self-employed business operations (§ 112 of the Civil Code)
- employment (§ 113 of the Civil Code) (this article does not apply to professional training courses)

Legal capacity

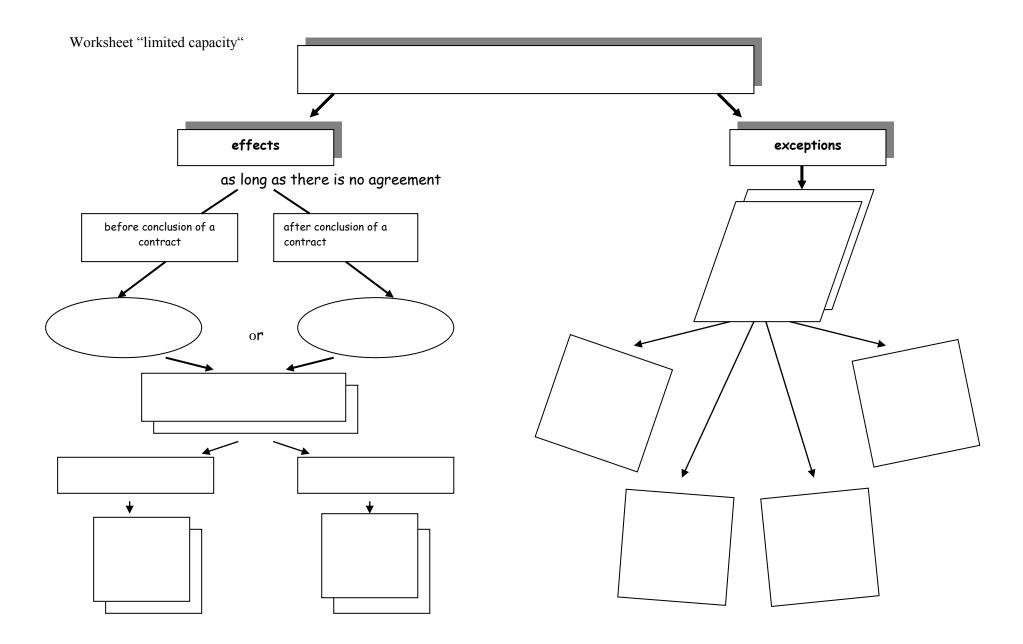

- 1. Read the following text.
- 2. Include the essential parts of the stage "legal capacity" on a poster.
- 3. Choose one person from your group to present the results to the whole class.

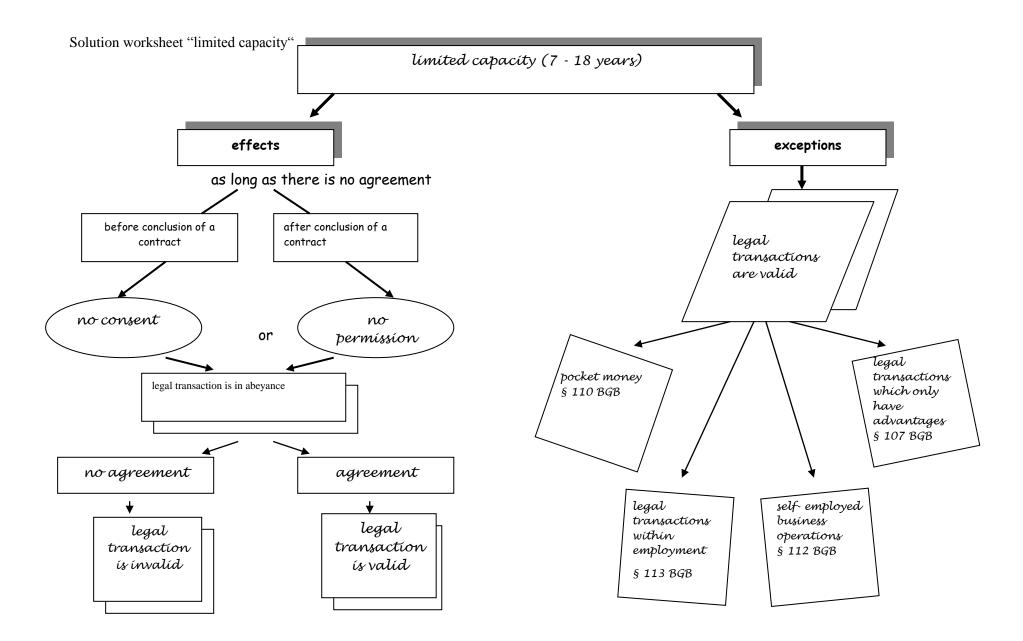

'Natural persons' aged 18 years and above are of full legal capacity as long as they are not declared incapable of managing their own affairs. The declarations of intention of persons of full legal age and capacity are legally effective.

Legal persons gain their legal capacity at the same time they acquire their capability. They are represented by authorities that are determined by operation of law (legal representatives). This could be the managing board of a registered association or the manager of a limited company, for instance.

Furthermore, legal persons can be represented by persons that are determined by virtue of power of attorney (business agents). This could be a proxy or an authorized signatory.
